"Why do I love to travel with my grandchildren? Why, who else would my husband and I most love to spend our free time with? Who else would see the world with such fresh and innocent eyes as these three beautiful little people? It doesn't matter where I am with my grandchildren, I treasure every second of our time together. And when we are traveling together, leaving our usual routines behind, it is heaven on earth."

INTERESTS

Travel is a gift. It's an education. It's a lasting memory. The novelist and essayist Marcel Proust said, "The real voyage of discovery consists not in seeking new landscapes, but in having new eyes." Grandchildren see the world — whether near or far — in special ways, and through them, grandparents rediscover the joy of travel. Nine of our travel writers share their thoughts on traveling with grandchildren. Get inspired, and plan your own trip!

“We like to travel with our 10-year-old grandson because he shares a fresh perspective on the places, attractions, and people we see. Exploring different parks, cities, towns, and hotels with him is rejuvenating. And he likes it when we act like a kid, too — something I’d never do under the watchful eyes of his parents.”
